SIDE LIGHTS ON THE GREAT WAR.

The Russian Orange-Book.

The Russian Orange-Book brings into strong relief than ever the determination with which England sought to keep the peace. Russia made her position clear from the first. On July 26 she announced that the Austro-Serbian conflict could not leave her indifferent. From July 26 wards M. Sazonoff and Count Szapary were engaged in friendly conversations, which held out very strong hopes of a satisfactory settlement. The Russian Ministers pointed out that some of the demands on Serbia could not be executed without legislation, and suggested that Count Szapary should be authorised to "exchange views" with him, in order that they might "find a formula" which could be acceptable to Serbia, while affording Austria satisfaction as to the status of her claims. On July 27 M.
Sazonoff was hopeful of the results, but expressed his sadness, if they failed, to accept the English proposal "or any other in a vindictive conduct favourable but on the same day the German Ambassador in Paris "implied strongly the exclusion of all possibility of mediation at a Conference." Still on the same July 27 M. Jules Cambon proposed to Herr von Jagow that all the Powers should convene Vienna "to obtain from any act which might aggravate the actual situation." Herr von Jagow categorically refused. On July 28 Sir Edward Grey was insisting that Germany should indicate the form in which she thought mediation should be exercised. She had already given her assent to it in "principle," but made difficulties about its application. Two days later M.
Sazonoff dictated to the German Ambassador in Petrograd the conditions on which Russia would suspend military preparations. These were over-ruled by the experts at Berlin. They were softened next day on Sir Edward's suggestion. The Powers were to examine what satisfaction
Serbia could give her great neighbour
"without infringing upon her rights as a sovereign State and upon her independence." We know from our own White Book that Austria-Hungary was ready to undertake not to infringe upon either. On July 31 M. Sazonoff was thanking Sir Edward for his friendly and firm language to Germany, "thanks to which the hope of finding a peaceful solution to the situation is not yet lost." At midnight the same day Germany presented her ultimatum.

Respecting the diplomacy which preceded the outbreak of war, Lord Cromer points out that the historian will have to relate that our principal mistake was that we indulged in unduly optimistic views of the future, and therefore failed to prepare adequately for a struggle, even if the diplomatic sense of "war" had not been brought to a head by the German Foreign Office, we sooner or later inevitable. On the other hand, it may safely be predicted that posterity will be amazed at the singular ineptitude of German policy and diplomacy.
The Germans have been wrong on every single point of importance; wrong as to the probable nature of Russia, England, Belgium, and Japan; wrong as to the value which they apparently attached to the Italian alliance; wrong as to the feeling likely to be evoked in America and in other neutral countries; wrong as to the Irish situation; wrong in respect to the relations existing between Great Britain and her self-governing Colonies; wrong as to the sentiments of the people both of South Africa and of India; wrong as to the effect of a declaration of war in Egypt and other Moslem countries; and wrong as to the opposition likely to be encountered throughout the civilized world by the inauguration of a policy of reaction.—London and China Express."

GERMANY'S INTENSE HATRED OF THE BRITISH.

A telegram received at Rome from Berlin states that Dr. Solz (the German Colonial Secretary), speaking to an interviewer recently, bemoaned the fate of Germany's colonial possessions, especially Samoa, which he describes as the Pearl of the Pacific, and he deplored the fact of its passing into the hands of the "vile invaders." Fortunately, however, he said, the fate of the colonies would not be decided in Africa and the Pacific, but on the European battlefields, where he hoped a decisive victory awaited the Germans.
"The British," he added, "are our worst enemies, and our task with regard to them is harder than many Germans imagine.
Germany will not fight England on land, but at sea she faces the most powerful fleet in the world, with the addition of the Japanese fleet. Our greatest expectation is merely to damage the enemy's fleet, although Nelson won at Trafalgar over greatly superior forces. We must fight Britain's disposal methods of damaging our commerce and industries. We must fight to the end in the military and economic domain, and impose security for at least a century against our continental enemy.
We fight for victory against England and for booty. That booty must be proportionate to the enormous sacrifice our people are enduring."

This Bureau aims to further international business connections and pale itself FREE OF CHARGE with the allied might of Russia, France, England and Belgium shows that they exceed their superior education, compared with the Russians, as a great and valuable asset.

Yet if the average Russian soldier is not equal to the Teuton in education and training he has qualities which have many times placed him on a pedestal and helped to build up the great Russian Empire. At Eylau his stubbornness and contempt of death evoked the admiration of Napoleon, who, on seeing how the Russians stood their ground, exclaimed:

"One has not only to kill them, but knock them over."

At Borodino, Sevastopol, Port Arthur, and many other terrible scenes of slaughter we have all seen what the simple grey-coated soldier is capable of when called upon. When properly led by one in whom he has confidence, "no hardship, privation, or act of heroism seems too much for him, especially if he is in sympathy with the cause for which he is fighting."

Under Suworoff and Kutusoff the Russian soldier withstood the best troops of Napoleon, and frequently defeated them under Blücher, Skobeleff, and Lipovitch; he has shown equal bravery.

The finest soldiers in the Russian army are, without question, the Guards, who each firm desirous of utilizing the services of this Bureau is asked to state references.

PAMPERING GERMAN PRISONERS.

The arrival in this country of hundreds of German soldiers, who had been captured by the Allies, has created a certain amount of morbid curiosity in the minds of the public which it would be well for the authorities to stifle at once before the feelings of the vast majority of Britons outrun their discretion and cause an outcry which is bound to have a damaging effect on recruiting. We do not for a moment suggest that any harsh measures be adopted towards these prisoners of war, but we do urge that they be kept in reasonable confinement and at such a distance from the public view that pampering by foolish women and their friends shall be an impossibility. When it is borne in mind that these unwearying German soldiers are probably part of the German armies which committed such vile outrages on men, women and children in Belgium and for all we know to the contrary, may, some of them, be the miscreants themselves, our protest against pampering will, we feel sure, be relayed throughout the length and breadth of the British Empire.

The report of the Belgian Commission on the acts committed by the German hordes is too recent for their villainous deeds to be forgotten, and although the men now interned in England may not be entirely to blame for participating in the outrages which almost every Belgian town and village experienced, we have to remember that they assisted in the outrages and on that account, if no other, their position in this country should be strictly defined by the authorities and a rigid military guard be maintained over them through which no visitors should be permitted to pass. It has been clearly proved on several occasions that not only has the Belgian nation suffered severely for their loyalty to a Treaty of which Germany was herself a signatory, but in dozens of cases our own wounded soldiers and those of our French Ally have been wantonly killed by German bayonets while lying helpless on the field of battle. It would be useless to assert that as we are the pioneers and foremost advocates of civilisation we ought to treat these German huns as men, for none of them deserve the name. Louvain, Malines and Rixens all tell their individual stories of how defenceless citizens were seized by German troops on the flimsiest pretence and shot in cold blood in view of their womenfolk, while these latter were violated and afterwards treated in a manner never experienced before, even in warfare with barbarous nations. And those are the wreaths upon which it is reported women have been lavishing gifts of various kinds, while highly placed personages have so far forgotten the deeds perpetrated by this so-called civilised enemy as to pay visits to the wounded German officers who were directly responsible for the shocking acts perpetrated by their men.

We know that war cannot be waged with gloved hands, but there is a earthly reason for attacking women and children, while even in the case of males, who may be suspected of firing on victorious troops, clear evidence of their acts should be adduced before the death penalty is enforced. As we are writing to-day, the papers contain numberless instances of the degradation inflicted on Belgian and French citizens, not to mention the wanton destruction of historic buildings which could not possibly have done anything to deserve such a sentence. Such a type I met a few years ago at Kostroma—a man who had been all through the campaign with Kropotkin. A more manly, modest soldier I have never seen in any country. Notwithstanding the fact that he had gone through the most terrible experiences and had faced death a hundred times he was as simple in his demeanour as a child.

Such a type I met a few years ago at

The Fruits of Culture, we have a typical specimen of one of these old soldiers, who has certainly learned more than good during his term of service. But if some of the weak ones go under, there are many who benefit by their military training and return to their villages men in every sense of the word.

Such a type I met a few years ago at Kostroma—a man who had been all through the campaign with Kropotkin. A more manly, modest soldier I have never seen in any country. Notwithstanding the fact that he had gone through the most terrible experiences and had faced death a hundred times he was as simple in his demeanour as a child.

It has been urged by some individuals that if we do not treat these wretched prisoners kindly reprisals will be made on our own captured soldiers in Germany. How do we know that the severest treatment is not being meted out to our comrades of the Entente? Judged by the foul acts of the Germans, it is firing on defenceless citizens and the burning of their homes and churches without the slightest reason, we should not be the least surprised to learn that not dozens, but hundreds of our wounded have been murdered by the enemy's troops. It was ordered on the highest authority in Germany that no quarter was to be given, and the savage treatment of our poor fellows on the battlefield, witnessed to by eye-witnesses, proves that the Emperor's hooligans have obeyed the instructions of their commandants in this respect. We have it also, indisputably, that the British, Belgian and French wounded were forced from the temporary hospitals and driven in front of the retreating German armies at the point of the bayonet, and no doubt many of these poor fellows died from this vile treatment. And all the time we are not only giving their wounded the best of medical attention, but dealing with their prisoners in a way that can only be described as absurd. Poor little Belgium has suffered terribly at the hands of the Kaiser's hooligans, and although his country will have to compensate Belgium for the damage inflicted, no amount of money will ever restore the poor people who have been sacrificed to the heartless hordes of the invaders. Even in captivity the arrogance of the German officers and men is plainly evident, and their confinement should be made as rigorous as possible, consistent with their lives being preserved to them.

and Elder Statesmen, and on August 16 sent an "advice" or ultimatum to Germany.

All the leading Japanese journals emphasized Japan's obligation to the Alliance and recalled the moral support which England extended to Japan during the war against Russia. The Asahi, however, published the history of Japanese-German relations during the past twenty years, a summary of which was to the effect that the German "advice" admonishing Japan for taking the Liaotung Peninsula from China, was of a peremptory nature—far more so than those of Russia and France. On April 23, 1895, the German Minister presented himself at the Foreign Office and in a most overbearing manner handed to the Foreign Minister the vice bluntly telling the Japanese to quit the peninsula for the sake of the peace of the Far East. In the original note it was even stated that Japan, a weak nation, could not afford to reject the advice and take the risk of entering into an armed conflict with such powerful nations as Germany and Russia. Upon the protest of the Foreign Department this part was struck out.

In the wake of Japan's forced evacuation of Liaotung, says the Asahi, Germany and Russia entered into a secret understanding in virtue of which Germany occupied Kiaochow and Russia, Liaotung, the self-same territory from which Japan was ousted only a short while before.

"Since that time the Kaiser has been encouraging the Czar to concentrate attention upon the Far East, that Germany could be comparatively free from Russian aggression in Europe. The result was the mustering in Manchuria of Russian troops in increasing numbers."

"When the Boxer disturbance broke out in China, Japan proposed to the Powers that she be permitted to send troops to China to rescue the beleaguered foreigners in Peking. Again the Kaiser interfered and said that unless he was convinced that Japan would not interfere with the interests of other Powers, he could not consent to Japan's proposal."

"During the Russo-Japanese War Germany's attitude toward Russia was a virtual violation of neutrality, and Japan had to protest against Germany offering secret assistance to Russia."

"What almost horrified the Japanese authorities was that a German officer who was, by special courtesy of the Japanese Government, permitted to accompany the Army to the front, was found secretly sending war reports to the German Government without first submitting them to the censor."

All these experiences seem to have led the Japanese to the conclusion that Germany was a dangerous element in the Far East. Immediately after England entered into the war, a number of British merchant vessels in the Far East were either chased or captured by German cruisers, while a vessel of the Russian Volunteer Fleet was captured by a German warship within Japanese jurisdiction. All these incidents were interpreted by Japan and England as a menace to the general peace of the Far East and to the "special interests" of England and Japan in this region, thus affording Japan the occasion for sending an ultimatum to Germany. And, of course, the Japanese had not forgotten the Kaiser's historic picture of the "Yellow Peril" in which an Oriental people, presumably the Japanese, was painted as tramping across the Asian continent and invading the Christendom of Europe.

The Japanese Government, in taking up the attitude they adopted towards Germany, proved themselves an honourable Ally, and one that, in the hour of stress, did not look upon their obligation as one relating merely to "a scrap of paper."

BY TELEGRAPH.

THE PROGRESS OF THE WAR.

SPLendid WORK BY THE ALLIES IN BELGIUM.

GERMANS REINFORCING THEIR RESERVE CORPS.

ANOTHER BIG RUSSIAN VICTORY.

TSINGTAU OCCUPIED.

We received information from a reliable Japanese source at half-past three this afternoon that Tsingtau has fallen and the Allies are in occupation of the fortress.

So far this now, which comes from Japan, has not been officially confirmed, but there is strong ground for believing its veracity.

(Reuter's Service to the China Mail.)

THE SIEGE OF TSINGTAU.

Japanese And British Casualties.

Mr. S. Inai, Consul-General for Japan at Hongkong, kindly sends us the following communication which he received this morning from the Japanese Army Department:

Our airships, flying over the city of Tsingtau, scattered a warning notice relative to the preservation of buildings.

Bombs were also dropped upon the enemy's principal defensive lines.

The casualties from the beginning of the blockade till November 5 number:

Japanese killed 200; wounded 875.

British killed 2; wounded 8.

DESPERATE FIGHTING OVER A LARGE AREA.

LONDON, Nov. 6, 6.40 p.m.

A communiqué states that between the rivers Somme and Oise, and the Oise and Meuse, detailed actions have been fought. We consolidated our advance on Avesnes, and our artillery in the forest of Aigle destroyed a German column of waggons at long range. We have retaken Sapignies. There has been desperate fighting in the Argonne region, where the enemy was repulsed by bayonet charges. We also repulsed fresh attacks in the region of the Woëvre, at Grand Couronne, Nancy, and in the forest of Parroy.

The communiqué emphasises the greatness of the victory in Galicia.

THE ENEMY REINFORCING THEIR RESERVE CORPS.

6.25 p.m.

A Paris communiqué states that no appreciable change has taken place over the whole front.

Fighting has continued on the same scale as before between Dixmude and the Lys without any marked advance or retreat.

There have been violent bombardments to the north of Armentières and against the town, but without result for the enemy.

Germans in North France and Belgium seem to be about to make changes in the composition of their forces and to be reinforcing their Reserve Corps of new formations, which have been severely handled with active troops, in order to attempt a new offensive, or at least to counteract in some measure for the singularly defeat which have been inflicted upon them.

ALLIES SPLENDID DEFENCE OF YPRES.

12.40 p.m.

The Press Bureau announces that in a despatch an Eye Witness at Headquarters today describes the momentous fighting around Ypres, which the Germans had set their hearts upon capturing by the 30th ult. It has been eminently a soldiers' battle and the British, without exaggeration, behaved splendidly. Sheer weight of metal and numbers might temporarily drive us back but the British would recover the ground by night in face of heavy odds, continuous and immense masses of reinforcements and the fire of an enormous concentration of guns. The British by their dogged resistance have upheld the reputation of the Army and we hold Ypres.

Our Allies, with that dash for which the French are famous, have done deeds which will never die.

The Belgians also have displayed the utmost gallantry.

THE STRUGGLE IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM.

LONDON, Nov. 6, 6.15 p.m.

A Paris communiqué says:—The Allies made slight progress east of Nieuport along the right bank of the Yser.

The enemy renewed their attacks from Dismude to the Lys, at several points, but with less energy than formerly; their infantry attacks especially being less violent.

The French and British lines did not retreat at any point, and, assuming the offensive, made notable progress in several directions.

The front from La Bassée to the Somme was especially marked by an artillery battle in the region of Roye.

We retained occupation of Quesnoy, and advanced appreciably towards Arras.

Artillery has been active between the Oise and Moezel.

The German attacks at several parts of the front were repulsed, in some cases after a day-long battle.

The position of the Right Wing is unchanged.

LONDON, Nov. 6.

A Paris communiqué issued at 11 o'clock in the evening says:—

There is no fresh information regarding operations north of the River Lys.

A violent German offensive movement north of Arras carried the trenches at Savy, which we re-captured.

All the German attacks in the St. Eustache region and in Armentières were repulsed.

There is nothing noteworthy elsewhere.

LONDON, Nov. 6, 6.05 a.m.

A Belgian communiqué says:—South of Charleroi the enemy continued the attack with the greatest violence on the Allied front between Hellesbeek and Messines.

All our positions were maintained.

BY TELEGRAPH.

TREMENDOUS DEFEAT OF THE AUSTRIANS BY RUSSIA.

LONDON, Nov. 6, 5.20 p.m.

A Petrograd Reuter telegram states that the Austrian defeat is exceedingly severe. The Russian forces recaptured Juraslov, taking 5,000 prisoners. The Austrians resisted desperately, but their persistent counter attacks, made both day and night, failed.

The Tsar and the Russian Staff attended a thanksgiving service at Headquarters on receipt of the news. The Austrians are retreating along the entire front.

RUSSIANS ADVANCING ON THE EAST PRUSSIAN FRONT.

LONDON, Nov. 6, 3.05 a.m.

A Petrograd official announcement states that the Russians continue to progress on the East Prussian front. The Germans are retreating along the whole front, only keeping a fortified position in the region of Wargobowio.

The Russian Army on the left bank of the Vistula continue a vigorous offensive, and are pursuing the retreating enemy.

The operations by the Russians of crossing the Saar continues successfully. The Acadians retreating.

FRANCE AT WAR WITH TURKEY.

LONDON, Nov. 6, 6.50 a.m.

A message from Bordeaux says that France has proclaimed a state of war exists with Turkey consequent on the Turkish Fleet's attack on a French merchantman and the non-dissimilis of the German Military and Naval missions.

ANOTHER MISCHIEVOUS REPORT.

LONDON, Nov. 6, 6.15 p.m.

The Press Bureau declares that there is absolutely no truth in the report that H.M.S. "Minotaur" has bombarded Jeddah. She has not been within five hundred miles of that town.

ANNEXATION OF CYPRUS.

LONDON, Nov. 5.

The London Gazette announces the annexation of Cyprus.

Cyprus is the third largest island in the Mediterranean. It is 60 miles from the Coast of Asia Minor and 41 from the coast of Syria. It has hitherto been administered by Great Britain under a convention concluded with the Sultan of Turkey at Constantinople in 1878. The following particulars of the island are given in the latest reference books: Its area is 3,584 square miles; population, 74,108 (including 144 military population); Mohammedans, 56,428; Christians (Greek Church), 24,480; others, 3,400. Inhabitants per square mile, 76.48. Estimated population, December 31st, 1912, 282,388 exclusive of military.

RUMOUR OF TURCO-BULGARIAN AGREEMENT DENIED.

LONDON, Nov. 6, 6.50 a.m.

A telegram from Paris states that M. Madjaroff, the Bulgarian Minister to Petrograd, interviewed by the Temps, denied the existence of an agreement between Turkey and Bulgaria, particularly regarding the passage of Ottoman troops through Thrace.

GREAT BRITAIN AND CONSCRIPTION.

LONDON, Nov. 5, 8.20 p.m.

Lord Selborne, in a recruiting speech at Chiswick, spoke of the possibility of having to adopt conscription, and said there was no sacrifice too great to ensure victory. None could foresee the political and social changes the war would involve. The part played by India must have a great effect on the future of India and her position in the Empire.

PERSEIA'S APPEAL TO GREAT BRITAIN.

LONDON, Nov. 5, 8.20 p.m.

Reuter learns that the Persian Government has assured the Powers of her strict neutrality.

An Imperial firman says the country looks to Great Britain to prevent Persia becoming a theatre of hostilities.

LOYALTY OF MALAY STATES.

LONDON, Nov. 5.

The Colonial Office announce that the Sultan of Perak desires to repeat to His Majesty his adherence to Great Britain. His Highness states there will be no trouble because of the state of war with Turkey. Also, after seeing the other Malay rulers, he will issue a Proclamation jointly with them.

WAR NEWS.

ENEMY SUBJECTS IN BENGAL.

Calcutta, 8th Oct.—A Bengal Government Press communiqué states:—These hundred and fifty enemy subjects have been dealt with since the outbreak of war, as follows:—Handed over to the Military 275, of whom 268 are interned at Ahmednagar, 9 are temporarily on parole, and 8, who exceeded the Reservist age, or are members of the Consular Services, are in India for Venice on the London route. On the 4th instant, Under Civil Control there are 71, of whom 28 have been sent to Kasipur, 16 persons, having families, 27 are in the army or are on the staff of the Presidency, 27 are under surveillance in Calcutta, and 27 are in the various districts of the Presidency, mainly Missionaries and Priests, under the control of the District Magistrates.

GREAT BRITAIN AND TURKEY.

A Government cable Extraordinary published yesterday contains on behalf of His Majesty's Government the following further statement concerning relations with Turkey:—

The grave situation which has arisen with Turkey involves no religious question and the Mahomedan Holy Places of Arabia as well as shrines in Mesopotamia will be immune from attack or molestation by the naval and military forces of Great Britain, France and Russia, and will any hostile action be taken upon the part of Turkey, it does not interfere with the pilgrimage of the Moslems to Mecca.

It is understood that the Government of Turkey does not interfere with the pilgrimage of the Moslems to Mecca.

GERMAN OFFICIAL REASON FOR BRITISH PROGRESS.

London, Friday, October 2.

A German cable Extraordinary states:—The Germans in Holland are agitated at the news of Germany's entry into the war. German newspapers which arrived to-day (Thursday) 1st October, make no comment, but what they consider they are preparing the German people for defeat and the ruin of their hopes.

Official messages ask that judgment be suspended as to how should arise that Germany & other Central Powers compelled to abandon certain positions.

The British troops are mentioned as pushing on by the sheer weight of their masses and the French are admitted to have taught a severe lesson. A week ago such statements would have meant the suppression of the newspaper printing them.

The Times military correspondent, commenting on the King's "Royal and Imperial command," regarding Sir John French's "Contingent Little Army," remarks:—"The German Army has been friend of Islam, and while one took Bowis, the other has long been plotting to

DEATH OF THE DUKE OF BUCKLEUCH.

LONDON, Nov. 5.

The death is announced of the Duke of Buccleuch.

[The Duke of Buccleuch was born in London in 1831 and succeeded his father in 1857. He married in 1850 Lucy Louisa Jane Hamilton, third daughter of the 1st Duke of Abercorn, and there were five sons and two daughters of the marriage. The late Duke owned about 450,000 acres. The heir to the title is the Earl of Dalkeith.]

THE VICTORIA THEATRE.

Mr. J. Blake, the manager, of the Victoria Theatre presented a splendid programme last evening at the third of a series of monthly performances in aid of the War Fund. There was an absence of local talent and a large audience responded well to the entertainment. The programme included well-known songs and sketches.

Mr. Cawsey's fine tenor voice was heard to particular advantage in "The Last Watch," "The Sailor's Grave" and "My Dream," as an encore. Mr. Harry Ralph received great applause for his bright and breezy monologues and by special request sang his Indian Club giving a performance that nearly brought down the house. Podlar Palmer provided a strong comic element in "Fluttering in the Breeze" which was handsomely received. Mr. Taylor was greeted with applause for his "Egypt" Mr. Haycock, as "country bumpkin" was a great success. Miss Hilda Barry sang "Little Grey Home"; and by special request, Bomba McArdele sang "The Hobo King of China." Mr. Daneburg accompanied Mr. Cawsey. Miss Barry played for Mr. Ralph and Mrs. Macrae provided the remainder of the musical entertainment except that Miss Barry sang for the 25th Punjab Band. Sunda Singh gave a highly successful selection on the clarinet. "Love Abacchines" which was well cheered. The Punjab Band again provided a programme of varied selections.
